This week on Top Performers: At a national meeting in Washington, D.C., education leaders from across the country and around the world discussed the implications of the new study from NCEE's Center on International Education Benchmarking, Empowered Educators. And from the Center on International Education Benchmarking, the top education news stories from the countries leading the world in student achievement.

Education Leaders Convene to Discuss How to Empower U.S. Educators

To launch the [Empowered Educators] study, NCEE convened a national meeting in Washington, D.C. this week. The event featured presentations on the report's findings and discussion by Linda and members of her research team, as well as reactions and debate from leading voices in education including the NEA's Lily Eskelsen Garcia, the OECD's Andreas Schleicher, National Board for Professional Teaching Standards President Peggy Brookins, Bank Street College of Education President Shael Polakow-Suransky and Iowa Department of Education Director Ryan Wise. The discussion was lively and penetrating, touching on, among many other things, why the United States, once a pioneer in this arena, has fallen so far behind, what it would take to implement these models in our country and where the money would come from to do it.

Watch the full event for yourself below. You will walk away with fresh perspectives, new questions and a greater understanding of not only why it is so important to strengthen and support the profession of teaching in the United States, but how we can do it in a very practical way.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE of STATE LEGISLATURES

Upcoming Webinar: State Approaches to Addressing Health Disparities

Health disparities—differences in health and health care experienced by groups based on social, economic and environmental factors—persist across the nation and lead to significant human and financial costs. State legislators have pursued various policy approaches to reduce health disparities in their communities and states, such as increasing workforce diversity, improving cultural competence in health care services and addressing the social determinants of health. Join NCSL's webinar on Tuesday, June 27, to learn more about health disparities and explore state policy approaches and examples.

While Congress considers major changes to the nation's health care laws, states are doing their best to prepare. But they are not waiting to make their health systems more effective and efficient. Tune into this new "State Health Spending" podcast to learn more about health care's impact on state budgets, including a recent item in State Legislatures magazine indicating that 5 percent of patients can account for 50 percent of a state's health care costs. The podcast highlights state initiatives, such as efforts to allow consumers to compare prices online and New Jersey's "hot-spotting" program that is proving reducing costs. It also explores preventive care programs and Medicaid in this revealing discussion.

Unintentional injuries are the No. 1 cause of death for people ages 1 to 44. These injuries—like those resulting from motor vehicle crashes, prescription drug overdoses, or traumatic brain injuries—create a substantial economic burden for individuals, families and states. The costs of treating fatal injuries and lost productivity by state range anywhere from $261 to $815 per capita, with total costs between $194 million and $12.1 billion per year. Many unintentional injuries are avoidable and NCSL's new postcard and webpage examine various state strategies aimed at preventing unintentional injuries.

The Buckeye Institute's Greg Lawson Urges Ohio to Reduce Bureaucratic Occupational Licensing Requirements

Lawson Testifies Before the Ohio House Government Accountability and Oversight Committee

Columbus, OH - The Buckeye Institute's Greg R. Lawson testified (see full testimony below) today before the Ohio House Government Accountability and Oversight Committee, where he urged the state to remove barriers to employment for thousands of cosmetologists across Ohio. The policies, included in House Bill 189 would make Ohio more competitive, more prosperous, and more attractive to entrepreneurs and their employees.

Highlighting the absurdity in Ohio's occupational licensing requirements, Lawson, a research fellow at The Buckeye Institute, said, "Unfortunately, Ohio cosmetologists must complete 250 more hours of training than their peers in Pennsylvania and 500 more hours than hairdressers in New York. The onerous training required for Ohio's cosmetologists is even more ridiculous when compared to the 150 hours of training required to be a state certified emergency medical technician."

Lawson continued, "With Ohio law currently requiring cosmetologists to have 10 times the training of basic EMTs, the need for licensing reform doesn't get much clearer."

Citing The Buckeye Institute's report Forbidden to Succeed: How Licensure Laws Hold Ohioans Back, Lawson revealed that Ohio's occupational licensing burdens are some of the worst in the nation. "Remarkably, nearly every Ohio license that requires training can be earned in less time in another state," said Lawson. "The state certainly needs to require appropriate training and licensing for jobs with health and safety concerns, such as physicians and pilots, and no one disputes this. But such concern fades dramatically when applied, for example, to auctioneers, travel guides, and hairdressers."

In closing, Lawson praised the progress Ohio has made and encouraged further changes that will make Ohio more competitive, more prosperous, and more attractive to entrepreneurs and their employees. "For a state still struggling to create new jobs, relieving these burdens remains imperative...House Bill 189 advances the state's anti-red-tape reform effort and will remove at least some of the occupational licensing obstacles faced by Ohio's working men and women."

Interested Party Testimony to the Ohio House Government Accountability and Oversight Committee on House Bill 189

Greg R. Lawson, Research Fellow
The Buckeye Institute for Public Policy Solutions
June 21, 2017

Thank you, Chairman Blessing, Vice Chair Reineke, Ranking Member Clyde, and members of the Committee, for the opportunity to testify regarding House Bill 189. My name is Greg R. Lawson. I am the research fellow at The Buckeye Institute for Public Policy Solutions, a free-market think tank that believes low taxes and limited government regulations will lead to a more prosperous Ohio.

House Bill 189 helps to address Ohio's "over-licensing" problem and will continue the important work started by Senate Bill 213 in the last General Assembly that lowered barriers of entry to Ohio's salon industry. Others have already addressed specific provisions in this bill, so let me just say that The Buckeye Institute generally supports reducing required education hours and we encourage policymakers to embrace license reciprocity with our sister states. After all, licensed cosmetologists in good standing in New York and Massachusetts should not have to clear additional hurdles to provide the same services and earn their living here in Ohio.

Unfortunately, Ohio cosmetologists must complete 250 hours of more training than their peers in Pennsylvania and 500 more hours than hairdressers in New York.[1] The onerous training required for Ohio's cosmetologists is even more ridiculous when compared to the 150 hours of training required to be a state certified Emergency Medical Technician.[2] With Ohio law currently requiring cosmetologists to have 10 times the training of basic EMTs, the need for licensing reform doesn't get much clearer.

Ohio's over-licensing problem extends well beyond the local hair salon. The Buckeye Institute's report Forbidden to Succeed: How Licensure Laws Hold Ohioans Back revealed that Ohio's occupational licensing burdens are well above average.[3] Of Ohio's 31 moderate-income occupations requiring licensure, 15 require hundreds or thousands of hours of training. Remarkably, nearly every Ohio license that requires training can be earned in less time in another state.[4] The state certainly needs to require appropriate training and licensing for jobs with health and safety concerns, such as physicians and pilots, and no one disputes this. However, such concern fades dramatically when applied, for example, to auctioneers, travel guides, and hairdressers.

Onerous licensing burdens -- essentially requiring workers to ask the government for a permission slip to earn a living -- make Ohio less competitive, less prosperous, and less attractive to entrepreneurs and their employees. Licensing requirements only make finding a job more difficult. Every unnecessary license is a red-taped hurdle that must be cleared. Every hour of unnecessary, unpaid training needed to satisfy bureaucratic requirements is an hour not spent earning tips, impressing a boss, serving a customer, or climbing a corporate ladder. Those are hours of productivity, hours of opportunity that young, low-income workers sorely need, but that the state continues to take away. For a state still struggling to create new jobs, relieving these burdens remains imperative. Although Ohio has done yeoman's work to recover from the Great Recession, she has not yet rebounded from the tech bubble burst and is still down more than 100,000 private sector jobs from March 2000. The state's labor force participation rate has improved, but at just 63.1 percent in April, more remains to be done.[5]

Even more concerning are the daunting employment prospects faced by many in Ohio's minority communities. Nationally, the unemployment rate among African Americans remains much higher than among other demographics. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the most recent unemployment rate was 7.9 percent for African Americans -- more than double the 3.8 percent unemployment rate for whites.[6] Similarly, unemployment confronts a staggering 29.3 percent of young African Americans between 16 and 19, and 12.8 percent of young whites.[7]

Given the relatively high number of African Americans and women in the salon industry, reforming Ohio's cosmetology laws offers a direct response to those alarming statistics.

House Bill 189 advances the state's anti-red-tape reform effort and will remove at least some of the occupational licensing obstacles faced by Ohio's working men and women. Of course, much more than HB 189 is needed and I look forward to exploring additional solutions with you and continuing our conversation on this important issue.

Thank you for your time and attention. I would be happy to answer any questions that the Committee might have.

Personalized learning, a national audience for

newswire@

A weekly report on education news & commentary from the nation's leading voice on education innovation and opportunity

PERSONALIZED LEARNING GAINS... a big endorsement from a newly released RAND report which finds that students who engage in PL do better in math than their peers and gives an added boost to kids who are behind their classmates and trying to catch up. The report also found that schools in the study "were pursuing a wide variety of practices to focus on the learning needs of each individual student in a supportive and flexible way;" and that "students experienced positive achievement effects and closed gaps relative to national norms." Oh, and it also found that the "implementation and effects [of PL]

both seemed stronger in the charter schools than in the district schools. D
Want to learn more about PL? Start here.

TICK-TICK-TICK. If the teacher unions thought independent charter schools were a looming threat, (see the NEA's new policy statement that supports "limiting charter growth" and "slow[ing] the diversion of resources from neighborhood public schools to charters") they must be beside themselves waiting to find out if SCOTUS will take up Bain v. California Teachers Association, which, The Washington Examiner succinctly explains is "a lawsuit that could end the ability of public-sector unions to force workers like her to support its political activities." Talk about a threat!

A NATIONAL AUDIENCE FOR CHARTERS. Charter schools were front and center on TV sets around the nation Sunday when NBC's Sunday Night With Megyn Kelly featured Boys Latin Founder & CER Board Member David Hardy in its piece on the controversy in urban communities over charter schools, and how people are responding. (The interview was arranged by CER so the reporter could focus on this school as part of the larger debate about how and why charter schools just may fix what ails many communities.) It was a well done, balanced report and David was a great advocate for charters. Still, as noted by pioneer Joe Nathan.

= A

Joe Nathan Reporter asked good questions - just wish someone had pointed out, for example, that a. Having choices is one of the fundamental principles of America; b. Despite what the attorney said, there are plenty of district magnet schools that use admissions tests to screen out students (where is her concern about those schools), c. competition can help improve schools if they effective leadership.

Many larger issues were left unaddressed, such as the fact that having choices is one of the fundamental principles of America. Piece begins at the 14:00 minute mark of the broadcast.

IN ANOTHER MEDIA COUP. In a Special Report on the what the SCOTUS Trinity Lutheran Church ruling means for the future of school choice, Fox News featured (via another CER-brokered interview) founding president of Parents for Educational Freedom in North Carolina, Darrell Allison, who was also an impressive spokesperson for choice. Between actions by the Trump administration, Supreme Court rulings, and various legislative efforts in states across the nation, the charter/choice/equitable funding/education innovation debate(s) are finally receiving the attention they deserve from the mainstream media. Now the trick is to get reporters and editors to stay focused – and remain fair – when covering these transformative issues.

AND IN LOCAL NEWS. The aforementioned debates have been occurring locally for years, and are still going on...with some yielding rather interesting debate points. Witness the appearance of Jim Bender, president of School Choice Wisconsin and Tim Slekar, dean of the school of education at Edgewood College, on Madison's "Capital City Sunday." As reported in The Capital Times, Mr. Bender argued that President Trump's emphasis on school choice was a good thing, giving "parents options on top of the traditional public school system here in Wisconsin." Mr. Selkar, in responding to points raised by Mr. Bender, conceded that "If you're an African-American in Madison ... the public system is failing you." But, his argument went, that's not the point, because "It's not about public schools failing, it's about the idea that people are meddling and public schools aren't allowed to use and do the things we're supposed to do."

INSIGHT, CONTEXT AND CONCLUSIONS. In a well-reasoned op-ed appearing in the Boston Globe, Eric Fehrstrom provides some little-known historical insight into the Blaine Amendment and looks at the impact of the Supreme Court's Trinity Lutheran decision. Pointing to other cases that the Court returned to the states for further consideration, Fehrnstrom notes that "While the Court has not yet ruled on [the] larger funding questions [in these cases], it would be hard for the justices to depart from the logic of their reasoning in Trinity Lutheran simply because the benefit is more substantial than a playground resurfacing." In other words, he concludes, this spells an end to "...the idea that you can treat churches differently for no other reason than they are religious, and that is a victory for liberty." Good piece. Worth a read.

2. Call the Congressmen below

8.19.2017 PASS THE HEARTBEAT BILL

Join the fight to end abortion

The Heartbeat Bill will be the most pro-life piece of legislation to become law since Roe v. Wade. It protects every child with a detectable heartbeat, and would instantly stop over 90% of America's abortions. Last year the bill passed in Ohio's House and Senate, but sadly it was vetoed by the Governor. This year, the bill has been resurrected and introduced on the federal level, HR – 490. The bill is rapidly gaining momentum and support in the halls of Congress, and if we push now, we can see it come to pass. Come and join us for the evening and show your support. Become a part of the end of abortion in our country.

8.19.2017 PASS THE HEARTBEAT BILL

Join the fight to end abortion

The Heartbeat Bill will be the most pro-life piece of legislation to become law since Roe v. Wade. It protects every child with a detectable heartbeat, and would instantly stop over 90% of America's abortions. Last year the bill passed in Ohio's House and Senate, but sadly it was vetoed by the Governor. This year, the bill has been resurrected and introduced on the federal level, HR - 490. The bill is rapidly gaining momentum and support in the halls of Congress, and if we push now, we can see it come to pass. Come and join us for the evening and show your support. Become a part of the end of abortion in our country.

Impact Ohio Announces 2017 Regional Conferences

Impact Ohio is excited to expand beyond the well-known Post Election Conference with regional conferences this fall in Akron, Cincinnati, Dayton, and Toledo.

At the 2017 regional conferences, key government officials, business leaders, and community members will gather to learn more about policy issues important to these regions.

Attendees will hear first-hand from political analysts, pundits, government leaders, and policy experts about issues that affect their community.

= A

The 2017 Impact Ohio Regional Conferences enjoy sponsorship from the Ohio Democratic and Republican Parties and from a wide variety of business and community leaders, including the local chamber of commerce and daily local newspaper in each community.

Conference agendas and registration will be coming soon.

IMPACT OHIO

Since its inception in 1984, Impact Ohio has offered information-packed conferences to explore elections, the outcomes of the political process, and policy choices facing Ohio and its communities.

Business, political, and community leaders recognize Impact Ohio as a valuable forum for policy discussion.

Impact Ohio is well-known for Post Election Conference, held every two years immediately following the general election. Post Election Conference offers the first post-election opportunity to hear directly from those who will shape Ohio's policy and political agenda for the upcoming biennium.

A History Lesson on School Choice

Education reformers have been pushing back against Randi Weingarten's 2010s inflammatory remarks at the AFT summer conference earlier this month, where she said the "use of privatization, coupled with disinvestment are only slightly more polite cousins of segregation."

See responses from Howard Fuller, Kevin Chavous and Derrell Bradford, Andrew Rotherham, Peter Cunningham, Jeanne Allen and Travis Pillow.

Charter Graduates Get a Leg Up in College

The NAACP and NEA believe charters should be stopped. But Richard Whitmire explained, "the timing of the intertwined anticharter campaigns, however, may prove awkward because of new data." This new data verifies that students from major charter networks are graduating college at three to five times the national average.

Today's Top 4 Calls

Here are the top 4 calls to make today for the Federal Heartbeat Bill to keep hearts beating:

"Congressman _____ is a member of the Pro-Life Caucus, why isn't he a co-sponsor yet of the pro-life Heartbeat Bill (HR 490) to protect every child whose heartbeat can be heard?"

1. NJ Christopher Smith (202) 225-3765
2. IL Mike Bost (202) 225-5661

3. IN Larry Bucshon (202) 225-4636
4. KY Harold Rogers (202) 225-4601

WE CAN DO BETTER THAN ONE PERCENT!

These Congressional Reps co-sponsored the "Pain Capable" 5-month bill, which will protect 1.3 percent of the babies facing abortion after 5 months (according to the CDC). The Heartbeat Bill will protect 95 percent--NEARLY ALL of the babies. Why settle for 1 percent, when you can protect every baby whose heartbeat can be heard?

Please call these members and encourage them to "Choose Life" and also co-sponsor HR 490 which will protect nearly every child.

"Congressman _____ co-sponsored the "Pain Capable 5 month bill" which will protect 1 percent of the babies facing abortion, why isn't (s)he also a co-sponsor of the pro-life Heartbeat Bill (HR 490) to protect 95 percent of the babies (whose heartbeats can be heard)?"

"Why isn't Congressman _____ a co-sponsor of the pro-life Heartbeat Bill (HR 490) to protect every child whose heartbeat can be heard? They're pro-life, aren't they?"

THESE CALLS ARE MOST CRITICAL TODAY as we head to DC to reach those who have not yet signed on the Heartbeat Bill. Please cover us in prayer! If you have time, please also call these Reps:

4 More Calls

Here are 4 calls to make today for the Federal Heartbeat Bill to keep hearts beating:

Congressman _____ is a member of the Pro-Life Caucus, why isn't he a co-sponsor yet of the pro-life Heartbeat Bill (HR 490) to protect every child whose heartbeat can be heard?

1. NJ Christopher Smith (202) 225-3765
2. IL Mike Bost (202) 225-5661
3. IN Larry Bucshon (202) 225-4636
4. KY Harold Rogers (202) 225-4601

WE CAN DO BETTER THAN ONE PERCENT!

These Congressional Reps co-sponsored the "Pain Capable" 5-month bill, which will protect 1 percent of the babies facing abortion after 5 months (according to the CDC). The Heartbeat Bill will protect 95 percent--NEARLY ALL of the babies. Why settle for 1 percent, when you can protect every baby whose heartbeat can be heard?

Please call these members and encourage them to "Choose Life" and also co-sponsor HR 490 which will protect nearly every child.

IMPACT OHIO

Impact Ohio is coming to Akron on Thursday, October 26.

The Impact Ohio Akron Conference is a great way to explore the 2017 general election, the outcomes of the political process, and policy choices facing the Akron region and the business community.

The conference will explore opportunities for the community to emerge as a "Smart City" and new solutions for attacking the opioid epidemic. Media experts will share their political and policy observations. And, over lunch, Democratic and Republican Party leaders will share their thoughts.

IMPACT OHIO

Since its inception in 1984, Impact Ohio has offered information-packed conferences to explore elections, the outcomes of the political process, and policy choices facing Ohio and its communities.

Business, political, and community leaders recognize Impact Ohio as a valuable forum for policy discussion.

Impact Ohio is well-known for Post Election Conference, held every two years immediately following the general election. Post Election Conference offers the first post-election opportunity to hear directly from those who will shape Ohio's policy and political agenda for the upcoming biennium.

A SILVER ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION. While the establishment and others are crowing over charter schools and trying regulate, slow or limit their growth, you may want to pause a moment to read the Wall Street Journal piece, "Charter Schools Are Flourishing on Their Silver Anniversary." As we noted last week, City Academy, the nation's first charter school opened in St. Paul, Minn. on Sept. 8, 1992. "Since then (charters) have spread and proven their success [as today] some 7,000 of these schools serve about three million students around the U.S." Let's take this occasion to remember just what the charter movement is all about: Freedom, innovation and opportunity for kids; not bureaucracy, the status quo, or a 19th century model of education. It's talked about in CER's book, released this summer, Charting a New Course – The Case for Freedom, Flexibility & Opportunity Through Charter Schools. Another great source is the numerous important research and analysis done by the Godfather of charter schools, Ted Kolderie, his work available at educationevolving.org.

UNION WATCH. Exercising lobbying muscle and throwing around political weight the NEA and AFT have long been a roadblock to change, a maddening thorn in the side of education reformers and pro-opportunity advocates, and a sharp-clawed force to be feared by anyone with political ambitions. But all across the country – in some very unlikely places – leaders are standing up to the unions and dramatically changing the dynamics of education reform. Read about it in Jeanne Allen's Washington Examiner op-ed "How teachers' unions became the paper tigers of education reform."

WITH THAT SAID ... Union activities are far from dead as witnessed by this headline: "Teachers At Chicago's Largest Charter School Network Renew Push To Unionize." The AFT affiliate can't stand the fact that a successful charter network has educated scores of at risk kids without their input, or their ongoing member losses. Fear mongering of teachers is ongoing, but we trust principle will prevail.

WILD WEST OUTPERFORMS. "If Arizona's public charter students were separated and measured as their own state, it would rank among a handful of the top-performing states in the entire country on the Nation's Report Card," says the Arizona Charter Schools Association. For the third straight year Arizona's charter school students have beaten the averages in the state's AzMERIT scores in virtually every subject area and at every grade level. And, we'll also note, per the item above, that Arizona was not far behind Minnesota in launching charters – opening their first school in 1995. The state now has 556 schools that serve 185,000 students. No wonder both Arizona and Minnesota score high on the 17th Edition of CER's National Charter School Law Rankings & Scorecard.

MEANWHILE IN WASHINGTON, D.C. ... Rumors that a federal effort to expand education opportunity has stalled are premature and exaggerated. A story today in Politico quoting insiders and those claiming to be in the know about the issues is, well, out-of-the-know. Interest in ensuring that more Americans have real access to education opportunity remains high on active issue on Capitol Hill and throughout Washington. How and who participates, and when it gets done actually takes a long time when dealing with a complex representative democracy (NB: readers may want to consult Tocqueville about this). Indeed thousands of supporters from around the country have been flooding Washington, meeting with their members of Congress within their own communities and working to educate the policy makers and policy leaders about why this issue matter. As they say in politics, "those who say don't know, and those who know, don't say."

Workers Compensation
Research Institute

As we put together the agenda for next year's WCRI Annual Issues & Research Conference (March 22 and 23, 2018, in Boston, MA), we wanted to share with you an example of a session from our last annual conference.

The session was on the current state of the workers' compensation system or "Grand Bargain," specifically whether it is working or needs revisiting and what the future holds for the 100-year-old system. The panel was moderated by WCRI's President and CEO John Ruser and included the following:

- David Michaels, former Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety and Health
- Bruce Wood of the American Insurance Association
- Emily Spieler, professor at Northeastern University
- Dr. David Deitz, former medical director for one of the largest workers' compensation insurers

We invite you to watch this session, which received rave reviews. Please know the video is close to an hour long.

This distinguished panel is an example of the type of sessions, topics, and thought leaders you will find at our annual conference. The benefits for you are new insights, valuable networking contacts, and a better understanding of key issues in today's competitive environment.

Please save the date for next year's WCRI Annual Issues & Research Conference (March 22 and 23, 2018, in Boston, MA). We will notify you when registration opens.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact us.

Hi ,

I am really excited this week about our year-long sponsorship opportunities.

Over the past year, we've managed to deliver 120,000 - 150,000 impressions online each month.

And get ready for this one...We generated over 500 leads for our year-long sponsors in the past 12-months.

If your business is interested in creating awareness and generating leads, this is a great opportunity to be included in a year-long content marketing strategy.

Plus...Not only do you get included in the day-to-day marketing strategy, next summer at DOYO Live you will have a prominent placement on signage, booth, and potential for sponsored talks.

We only open up 5-year long sponsorship packages...We've got some very good businesses lining up.

This will all get finalized by November 1, 2017 - If you are interested in, be sure to read more, and complete the form to schedule time to discuss DOYO Live year long sponsorship!!!!

Reserve Your Meeting Today - DOYO Live - Year Long Sponsorship

Thanks,
